Swept away

It's easy to think of Jesus miracles as something fitting a distant, ancient time, certainly not our modern day. Especially those awkward miracles dealing with demons or unclean spirits. That might have happened then we think, but not today. Demons? Now, really. Somebody pass the remote.

But those demons aren't as far away as we'd like to imagine. Unclean spirits come in all shapes and sizes. The envious whisperer that goads you to spend more than you earn to keep up with the neighbors. Perhaps you've met the selfish sloth who agrees when you want to spend Sunday in bed, not at Mass. And for some of us, who have let our lives get seriously off track, we cringe in the darkness, echoing the unclean spirit: "Jesus, what do you have to do with me?" God's gentle, persistent love will not let us huddle there in corruption. He will continue to cast His harsh but honest light on the corners of our lives and wait for us to sweep out the "demons" in residence. It's a story as vitally necessary now as it was 2000 years ago. Spend a minute in prayer and ask God, what do I need to sweep away today?
